ASSUMPTION
COLLEGE
HEIGHTS
1967

An expression of
the fiftieth graduating class
of Assumption College

We.

We are.

We are a dramatic communal hypothesis.

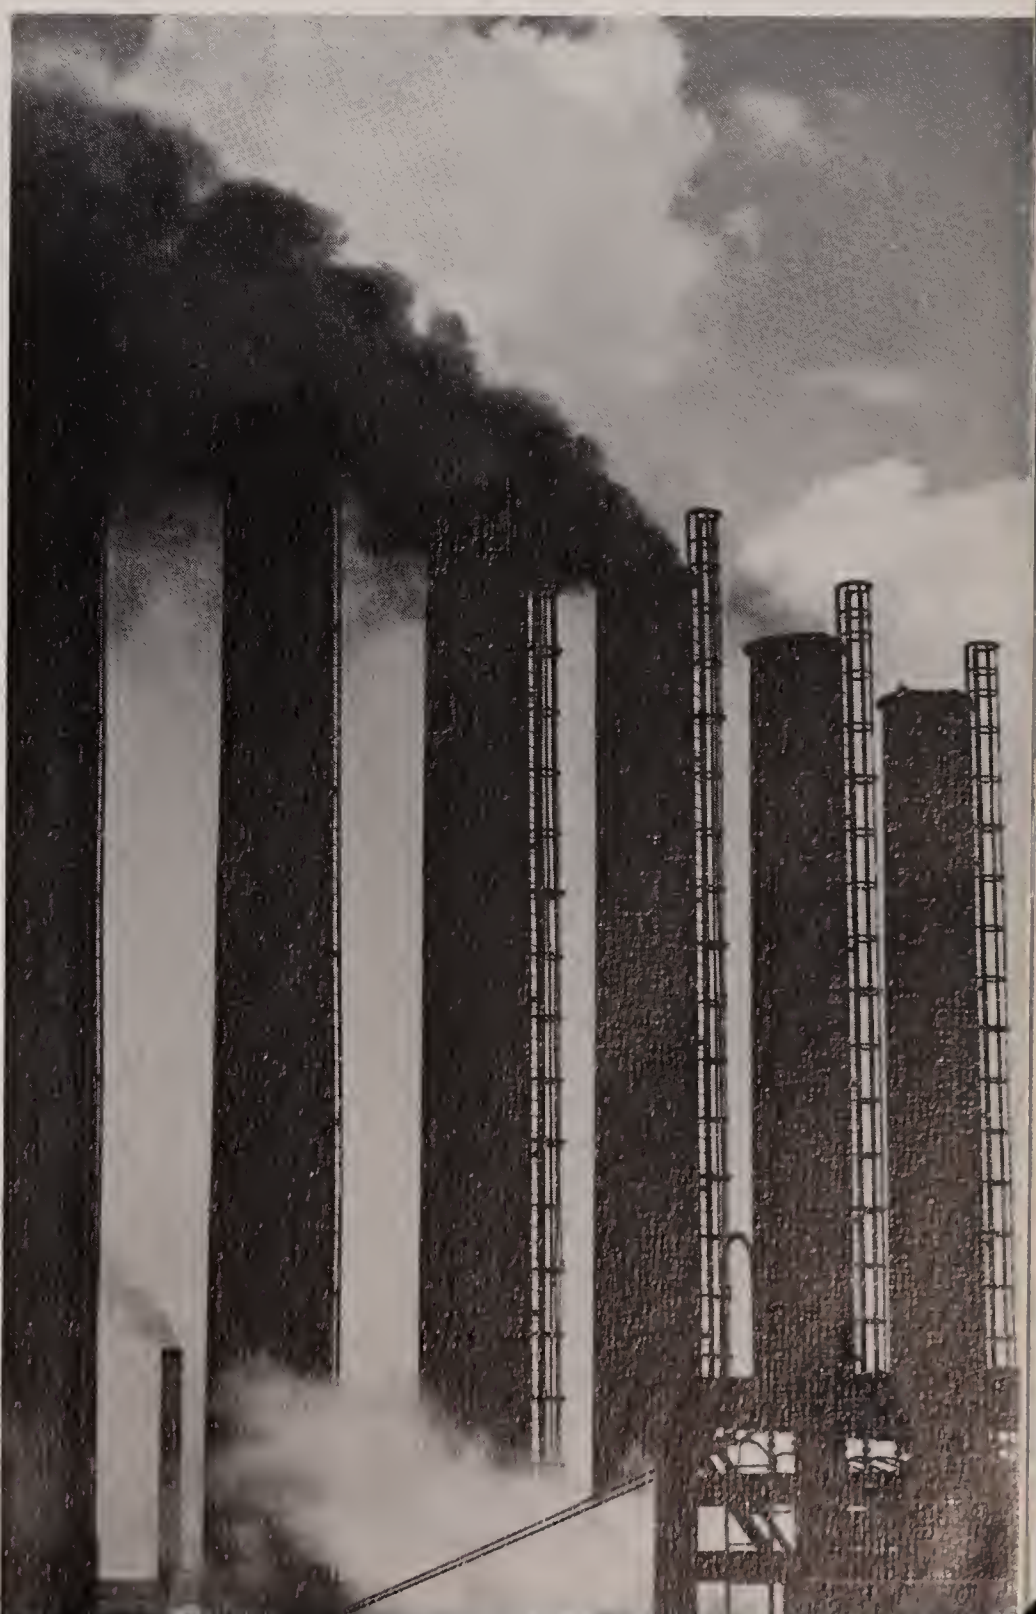

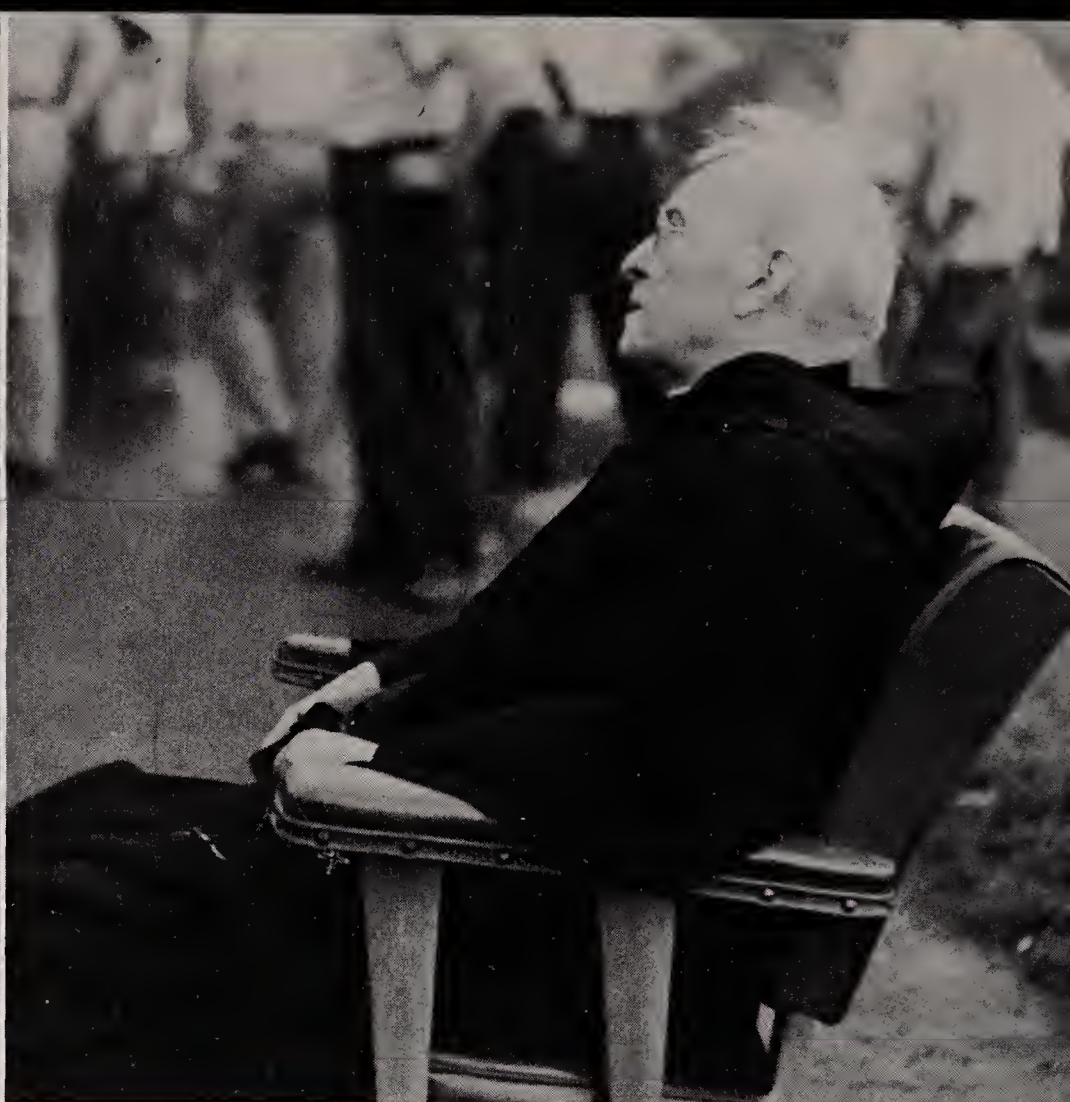

*We became in 1904, a vintage year for Wonder Bread,
Theodore Roosevelt, the Ashcan School,
The Lycée*

We are sixty-three unrehearsed years and fifty dissected graduating classes.

*We were rooted in Europe, speaking a New World French.
We used Puritan minds and strong Quebec backs,*

*and raised our facade,
on an empty mound,
resplendent in the ugly industrial
heart of this city.
We kept purposely small
with aspiring intentions,
ensconsed in the liberal arts.*

We the target 1953.

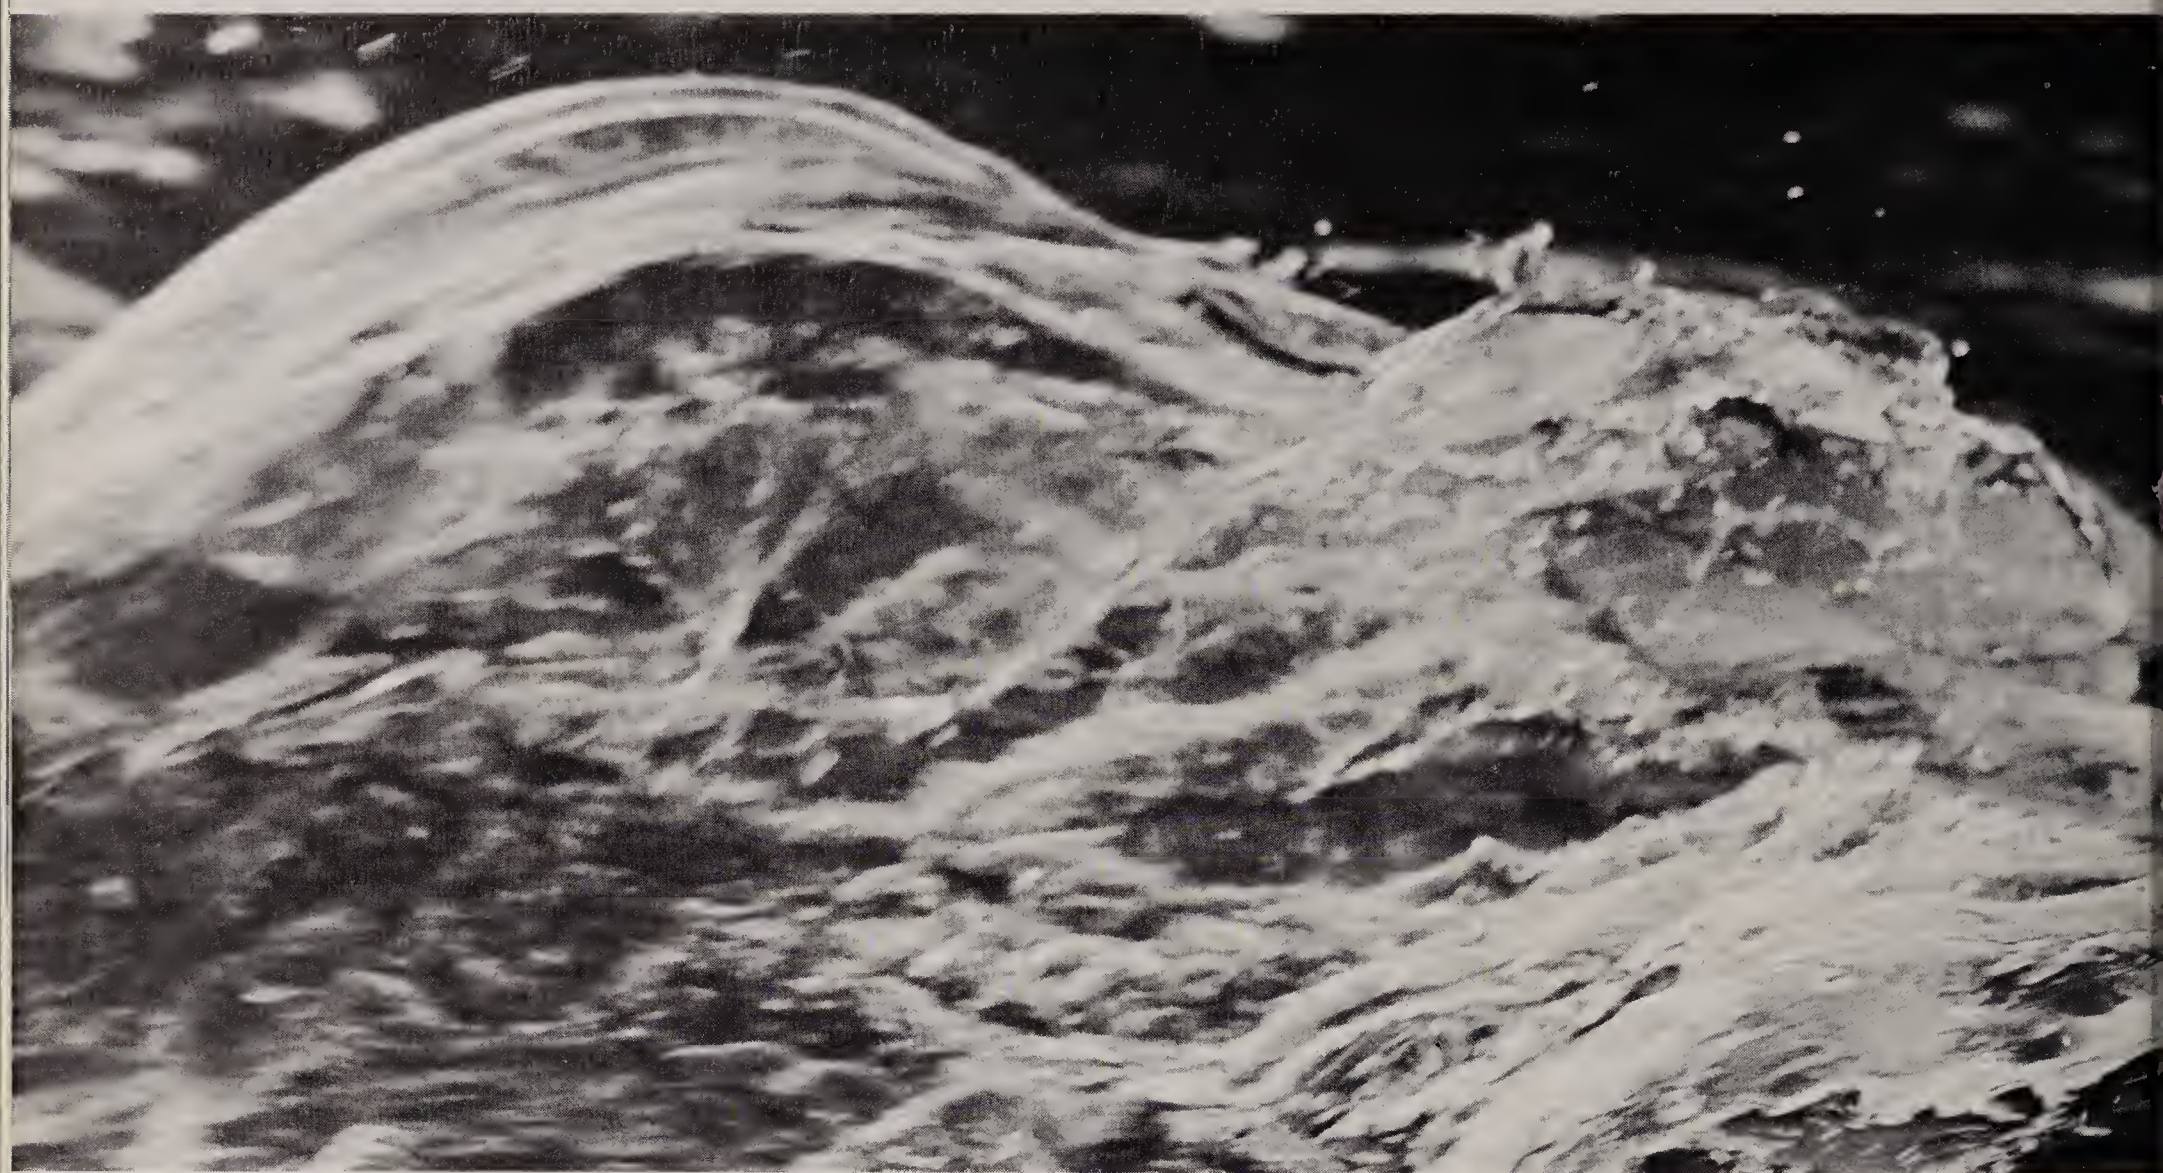

We the ashes, we the Phoenix.

A virgin hill was occupied.

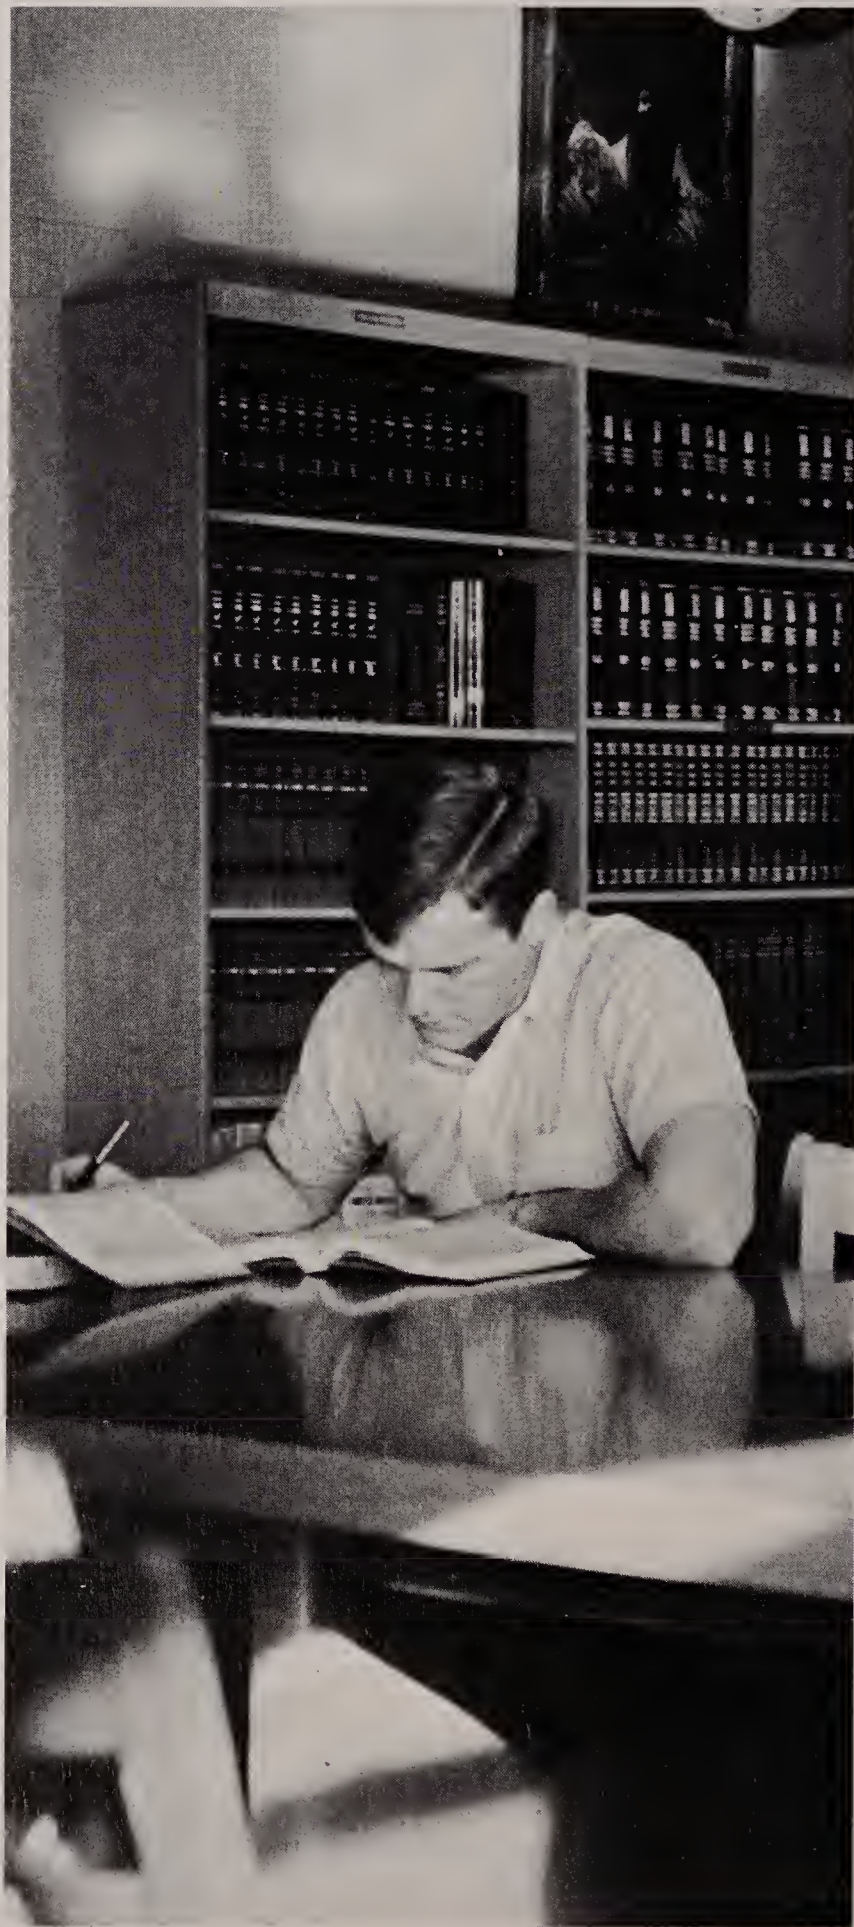

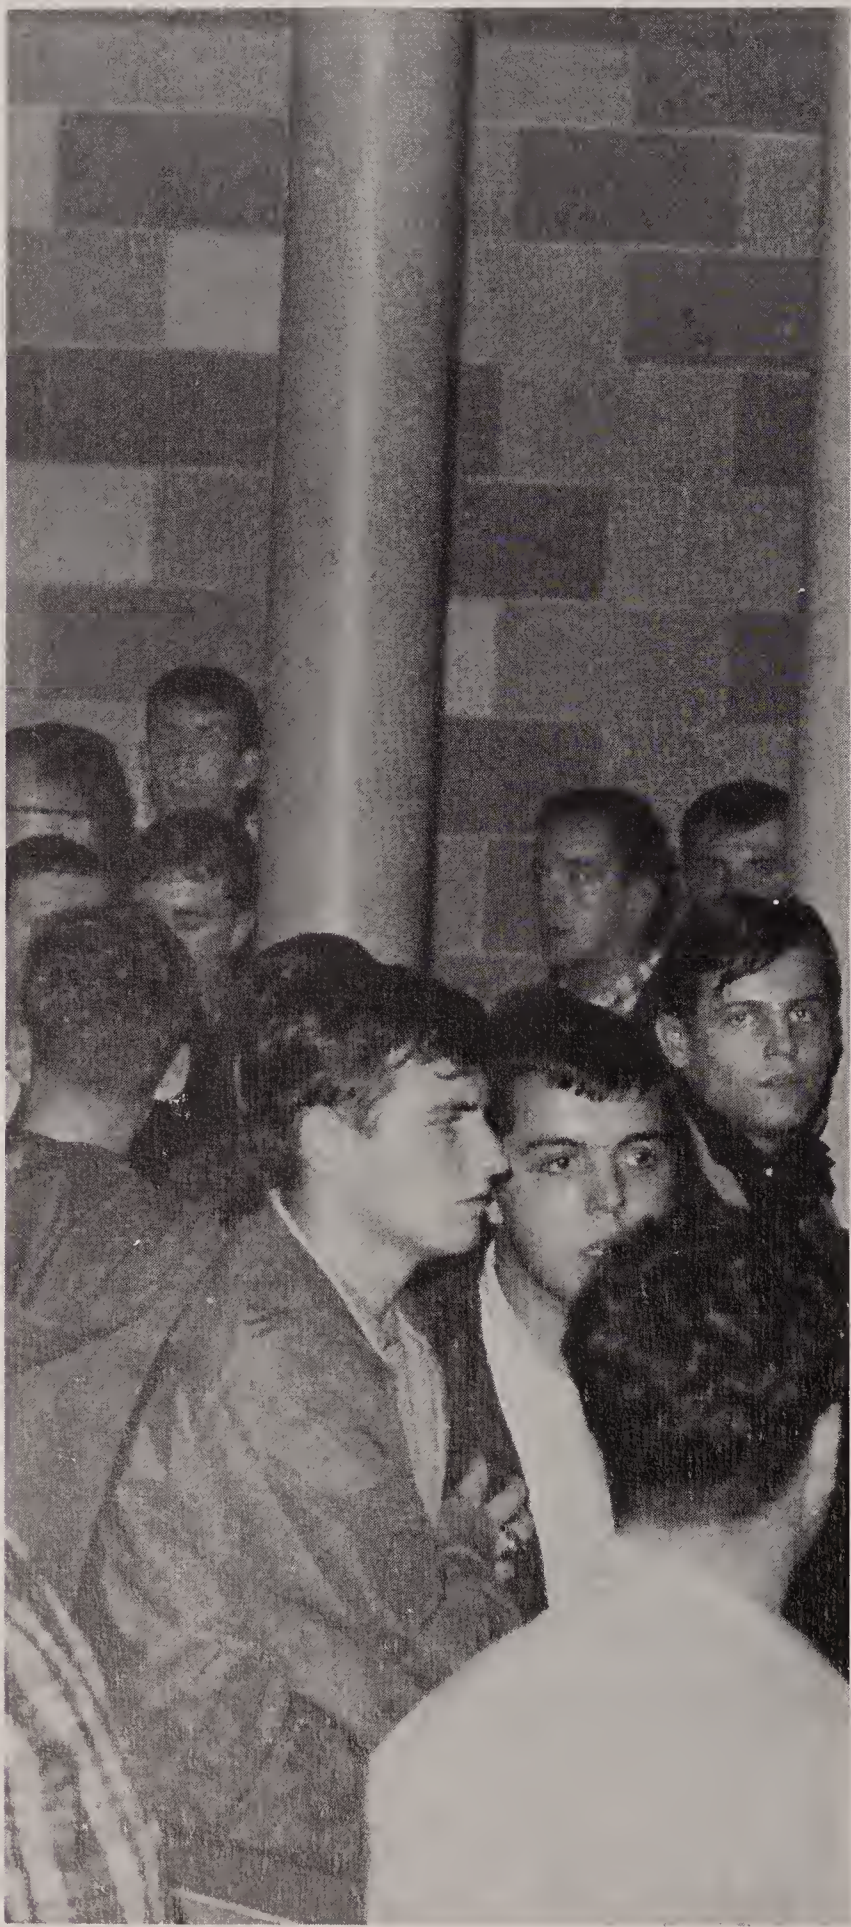

*We arrived revoltingly naive, ridiculously ignorant, eager.
We now speak the language of Batman and Shakespeare.
We are indignantly different and proud of it.
We are a scale.
We accept, reject; make knowledge our own.
How rich we are, penniless masters.
It's time to journey forth . . .*

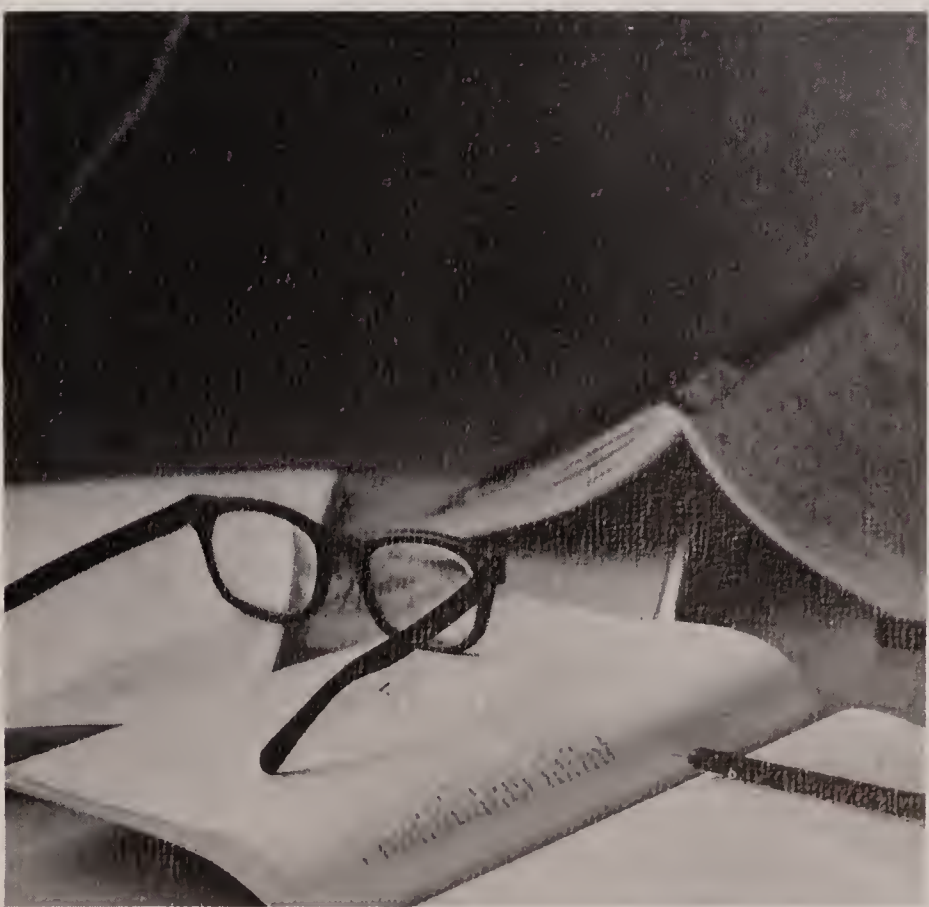

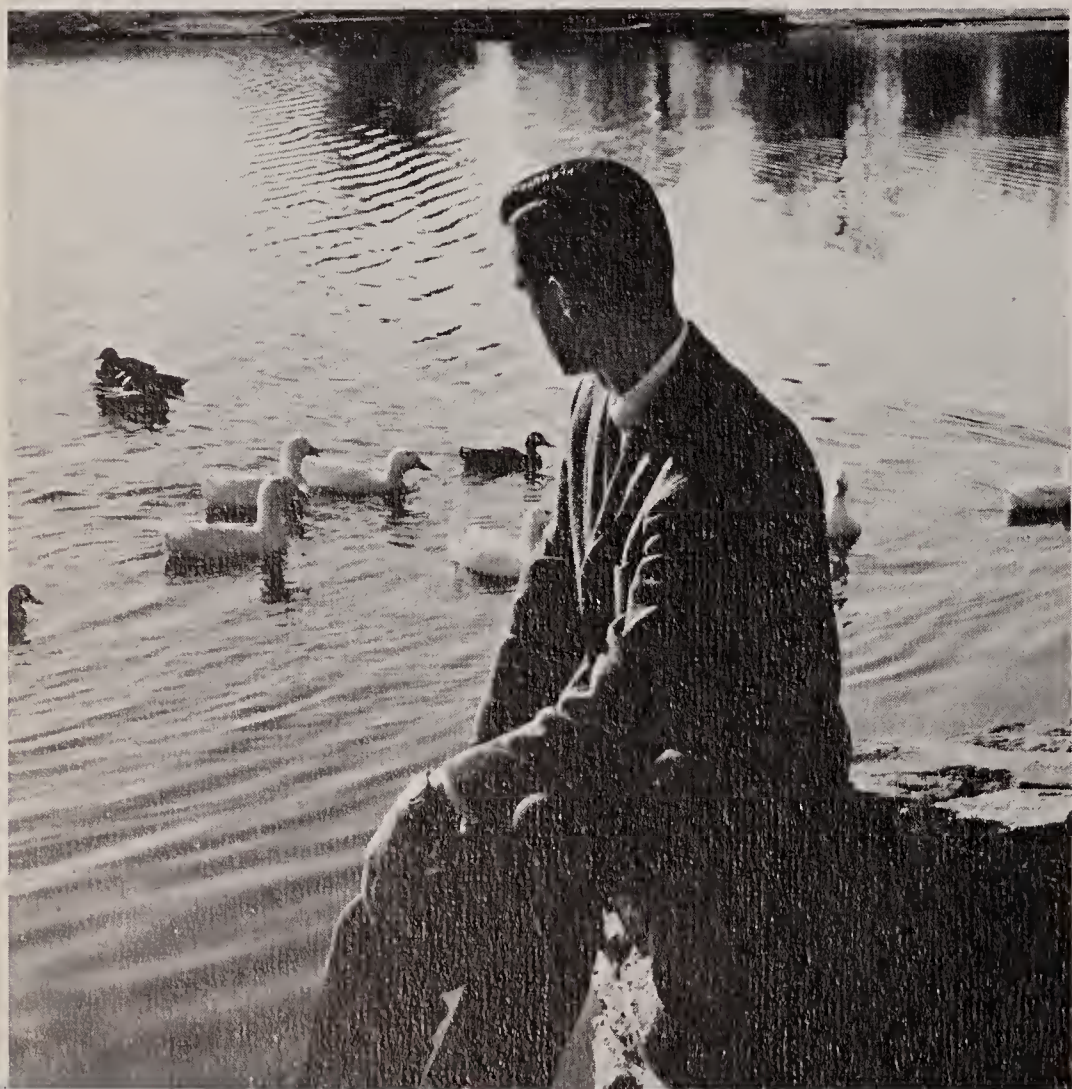

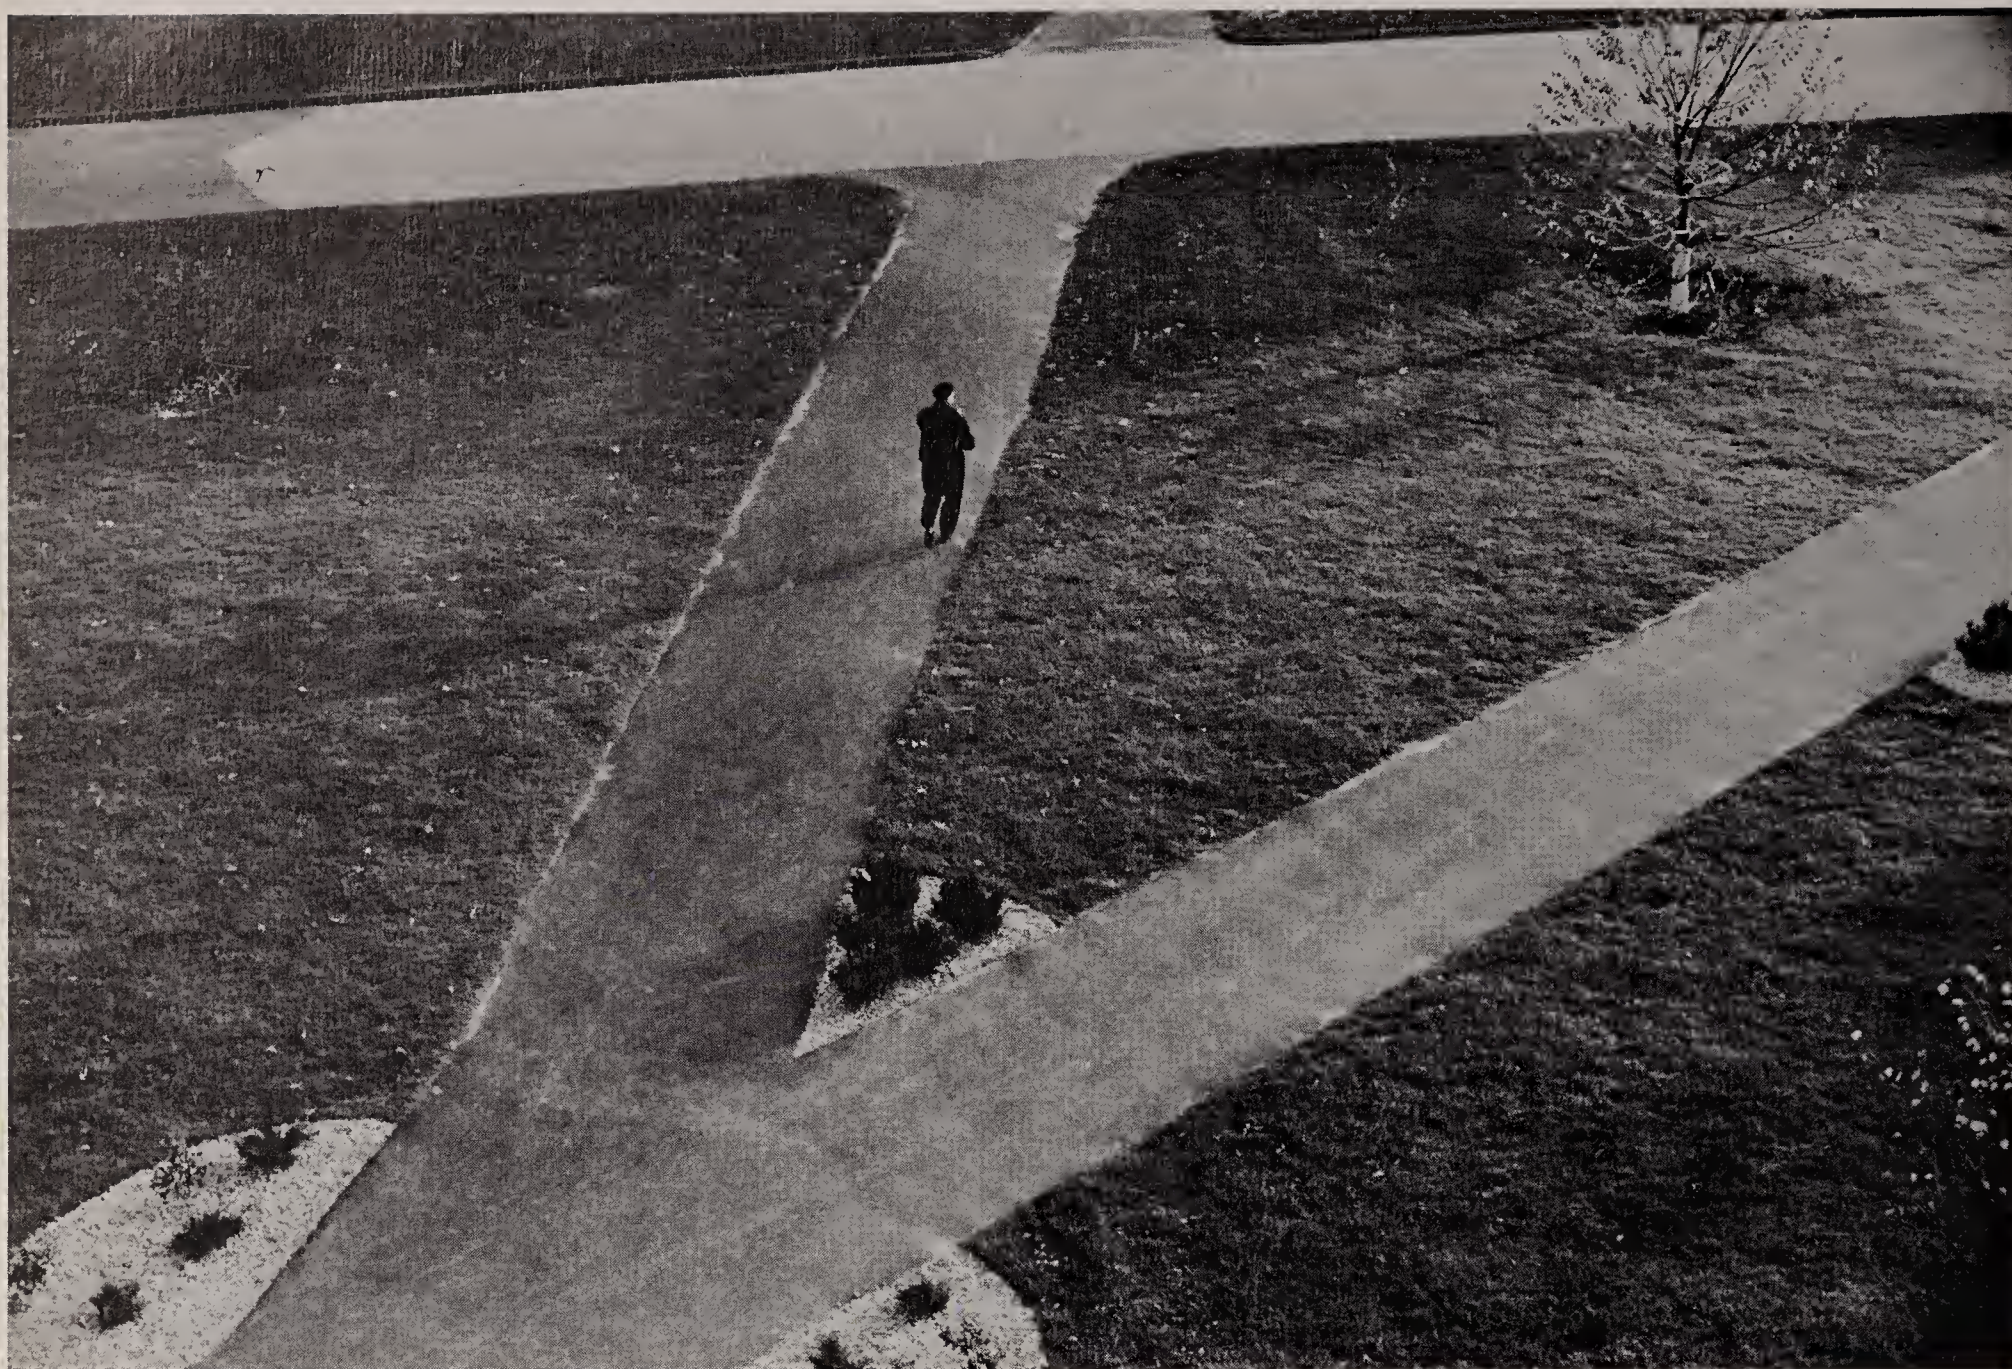

*Now, we are men
of multifarious talents*

*In tastes, opinions, thoughts
we are widely divergent*

*As persons, we are
each a mystery
to each other,*

*And each even
an enigma
to himself.*

*And, ours is a world
confused as we are diverse.*

*For what are we
in this world,
and what is the good
of our talents . . .*

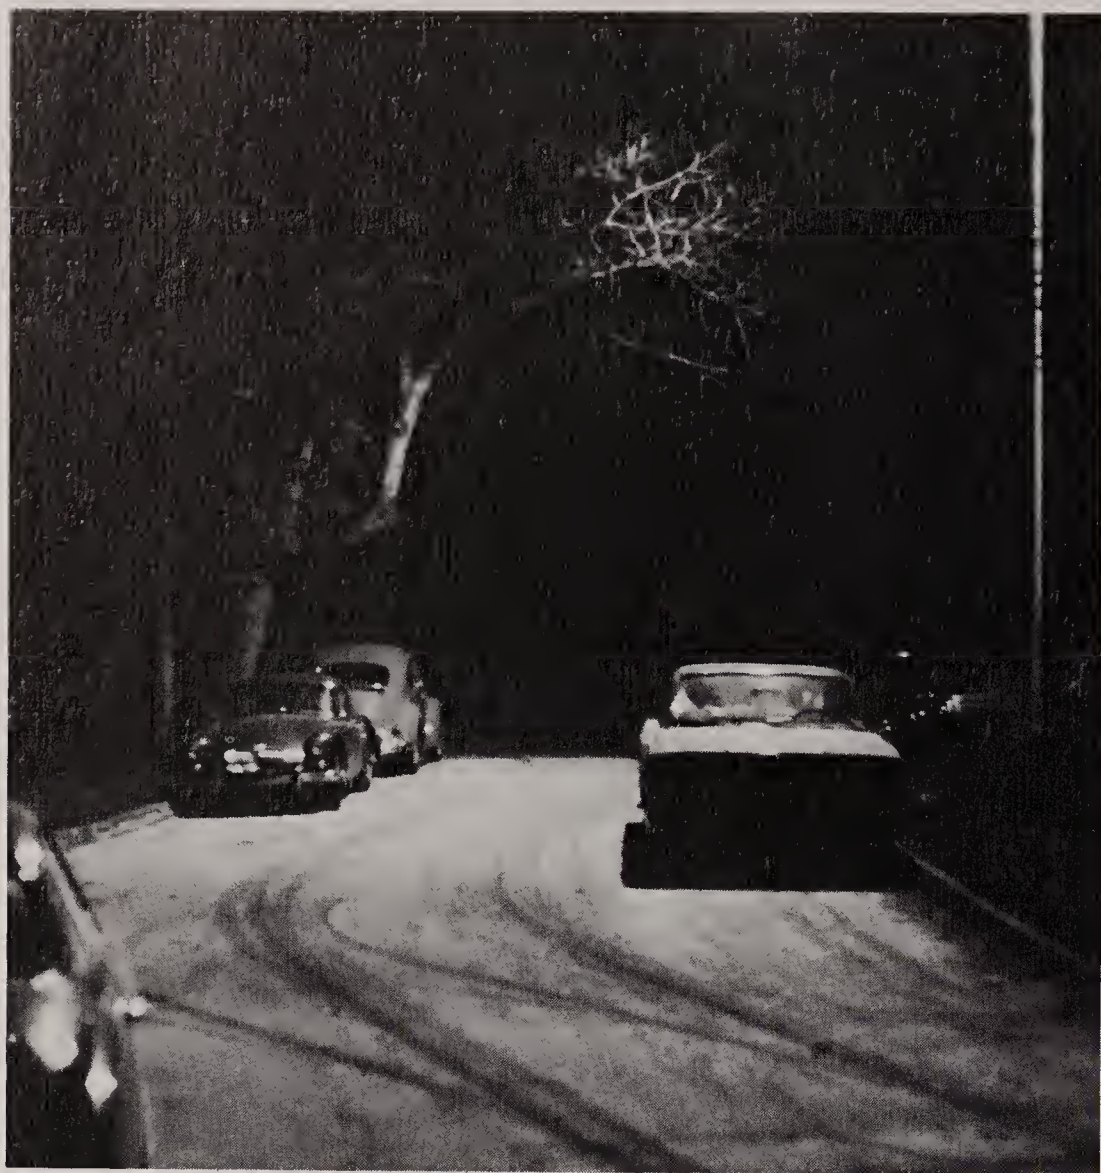

A high-contrast, black and white photograph of a person standing in a doorway, silhouetted against a bright background. The person is wearing a dark, long-sleeved garment and light-colored pants. The image is grainy and has a stark, graphic quality.

*. . . if in these times
we were to fall before
the phantom named Absurd . . .*

*. . . if we were to stand as silent sheep
stript of their diversity,
or as impotent beings
conscious only of themselves?*

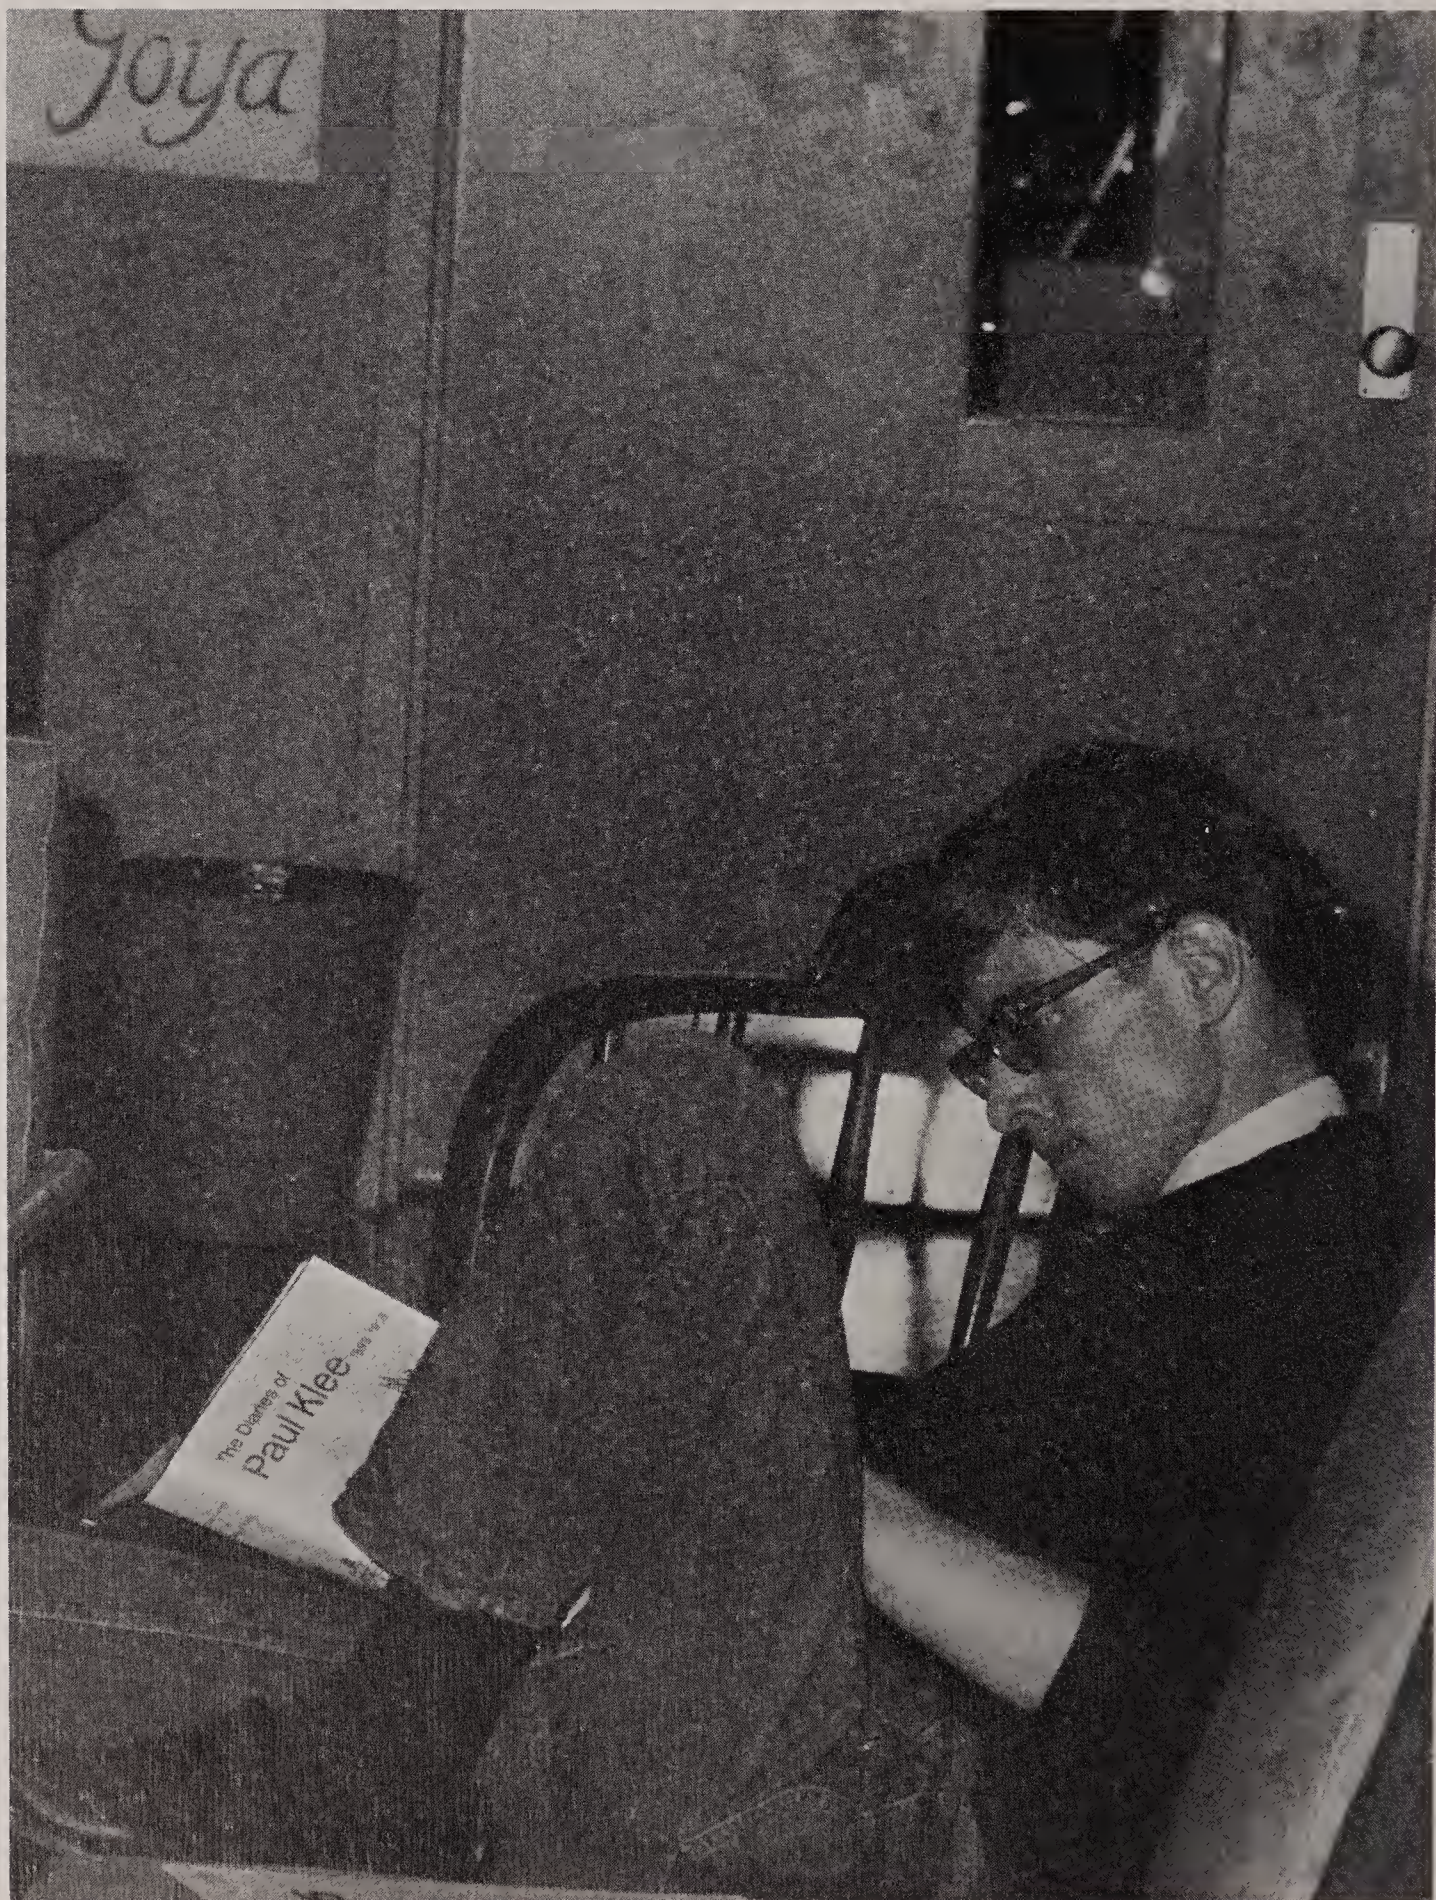

*It was our choice
that brought us to this college called liberal.*

*What factor of unity
drew us together?*

Here it was that the new sound of freedom could catch our ears.

*And here we found that,
on this planet,
we,
so diverse . . .*

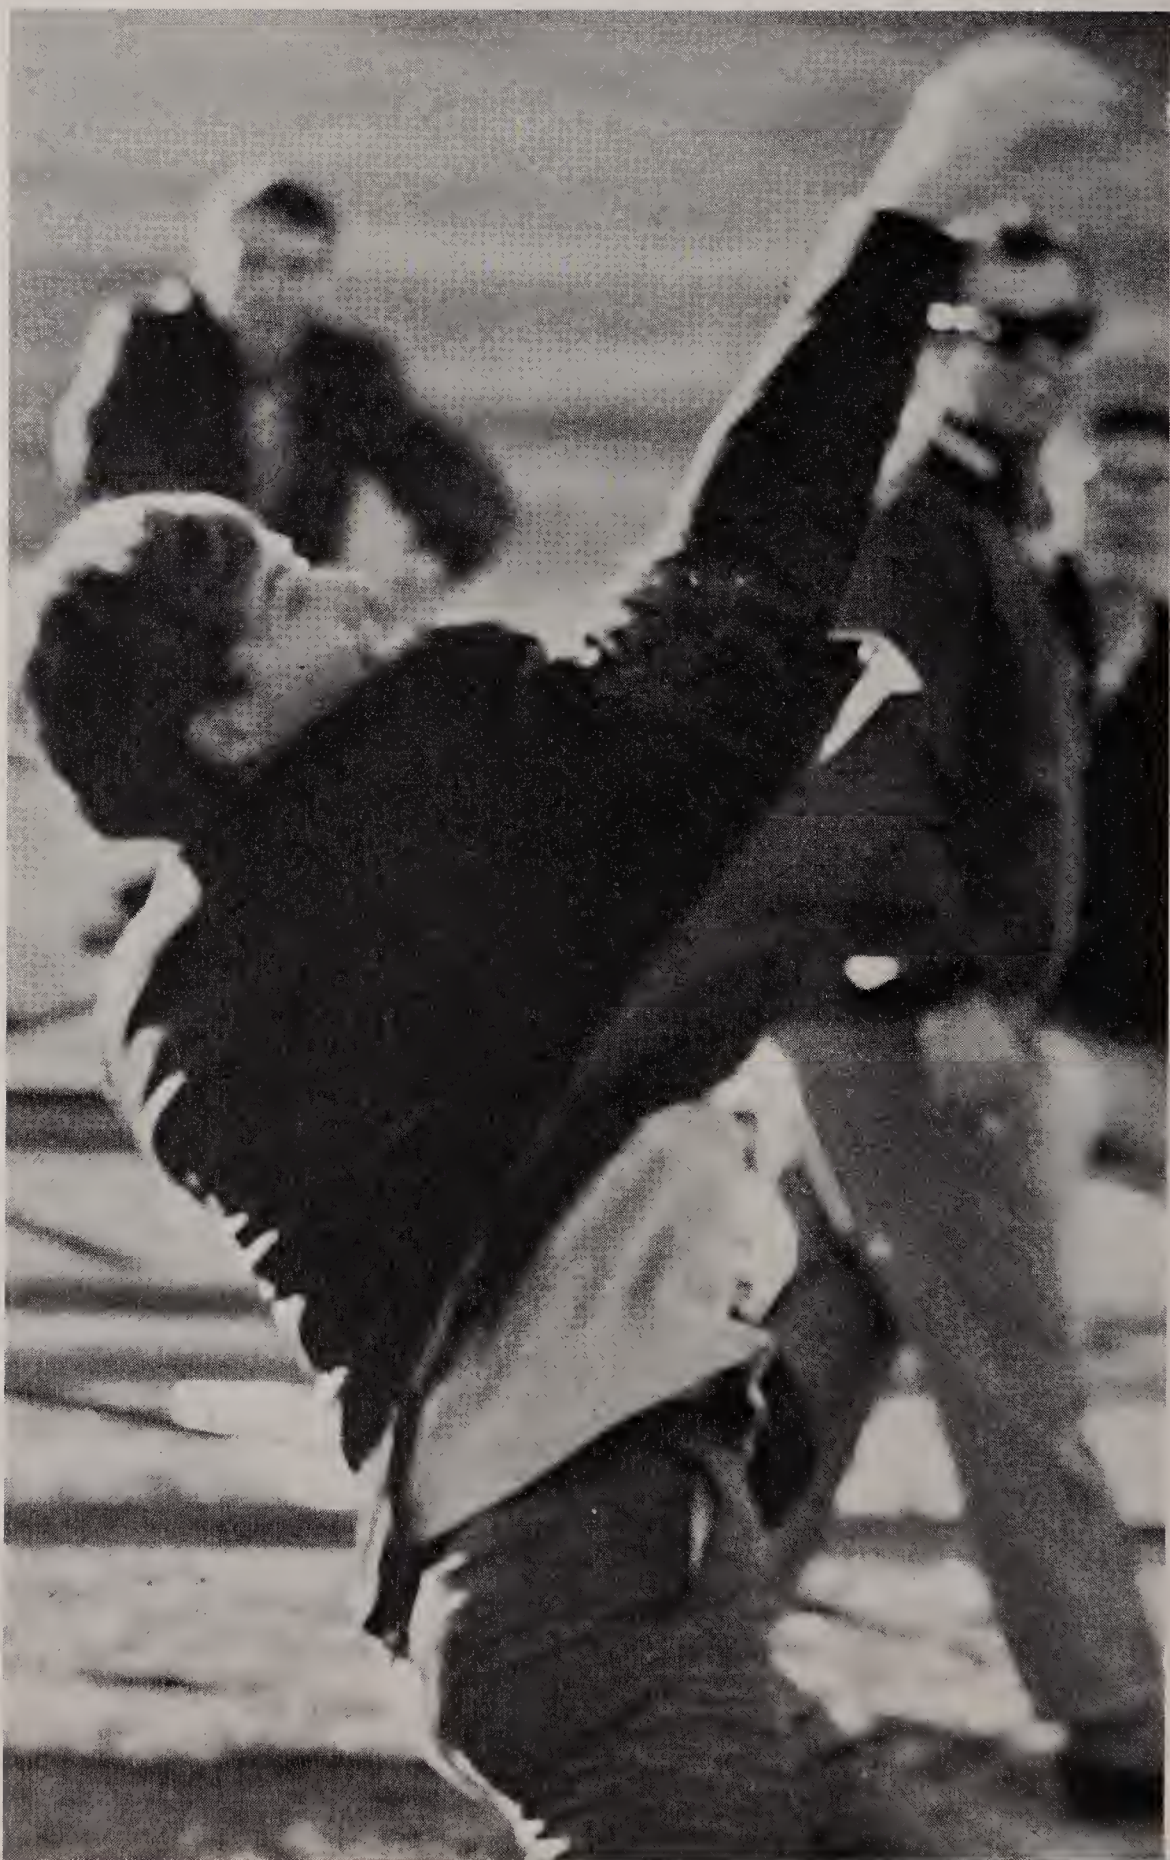

*. . . are not bound in subjection
to a thoughtless, spiritless, mass culture . . .*

*. . . that we can free ourselves
of ourselves . . .*

*. . . and amidst
the oblivious
exhilaration
of human activity
aimed high . . .*

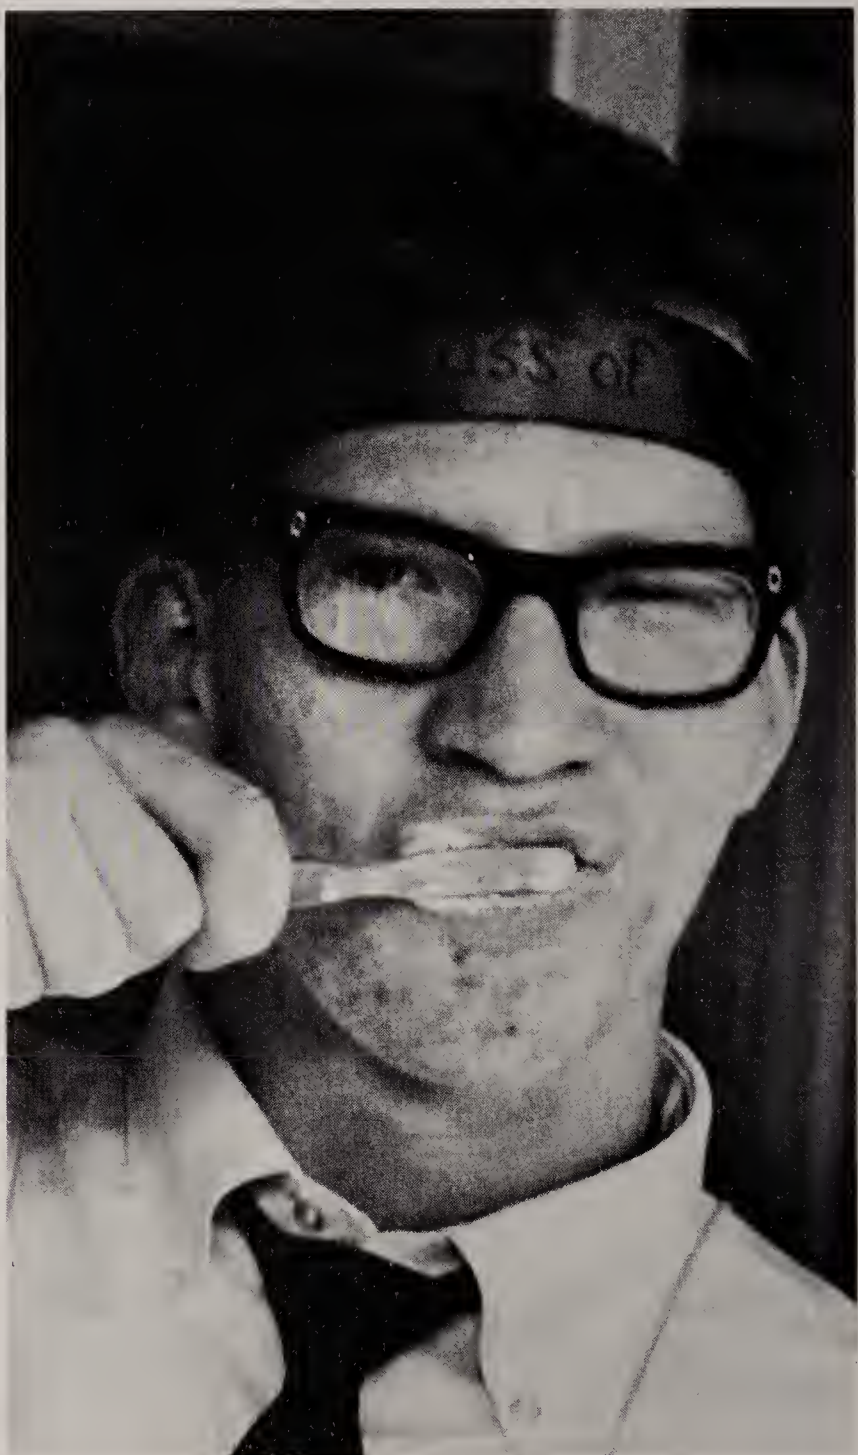

*. . . find worthy objects for
our talents,
real goals for our energies,
and the beginnings of direction
for our world.*

It is no adjustment to society we seek . . .

*. . . we seek to change it.
And with a vision of what is
in truth great
we can.*

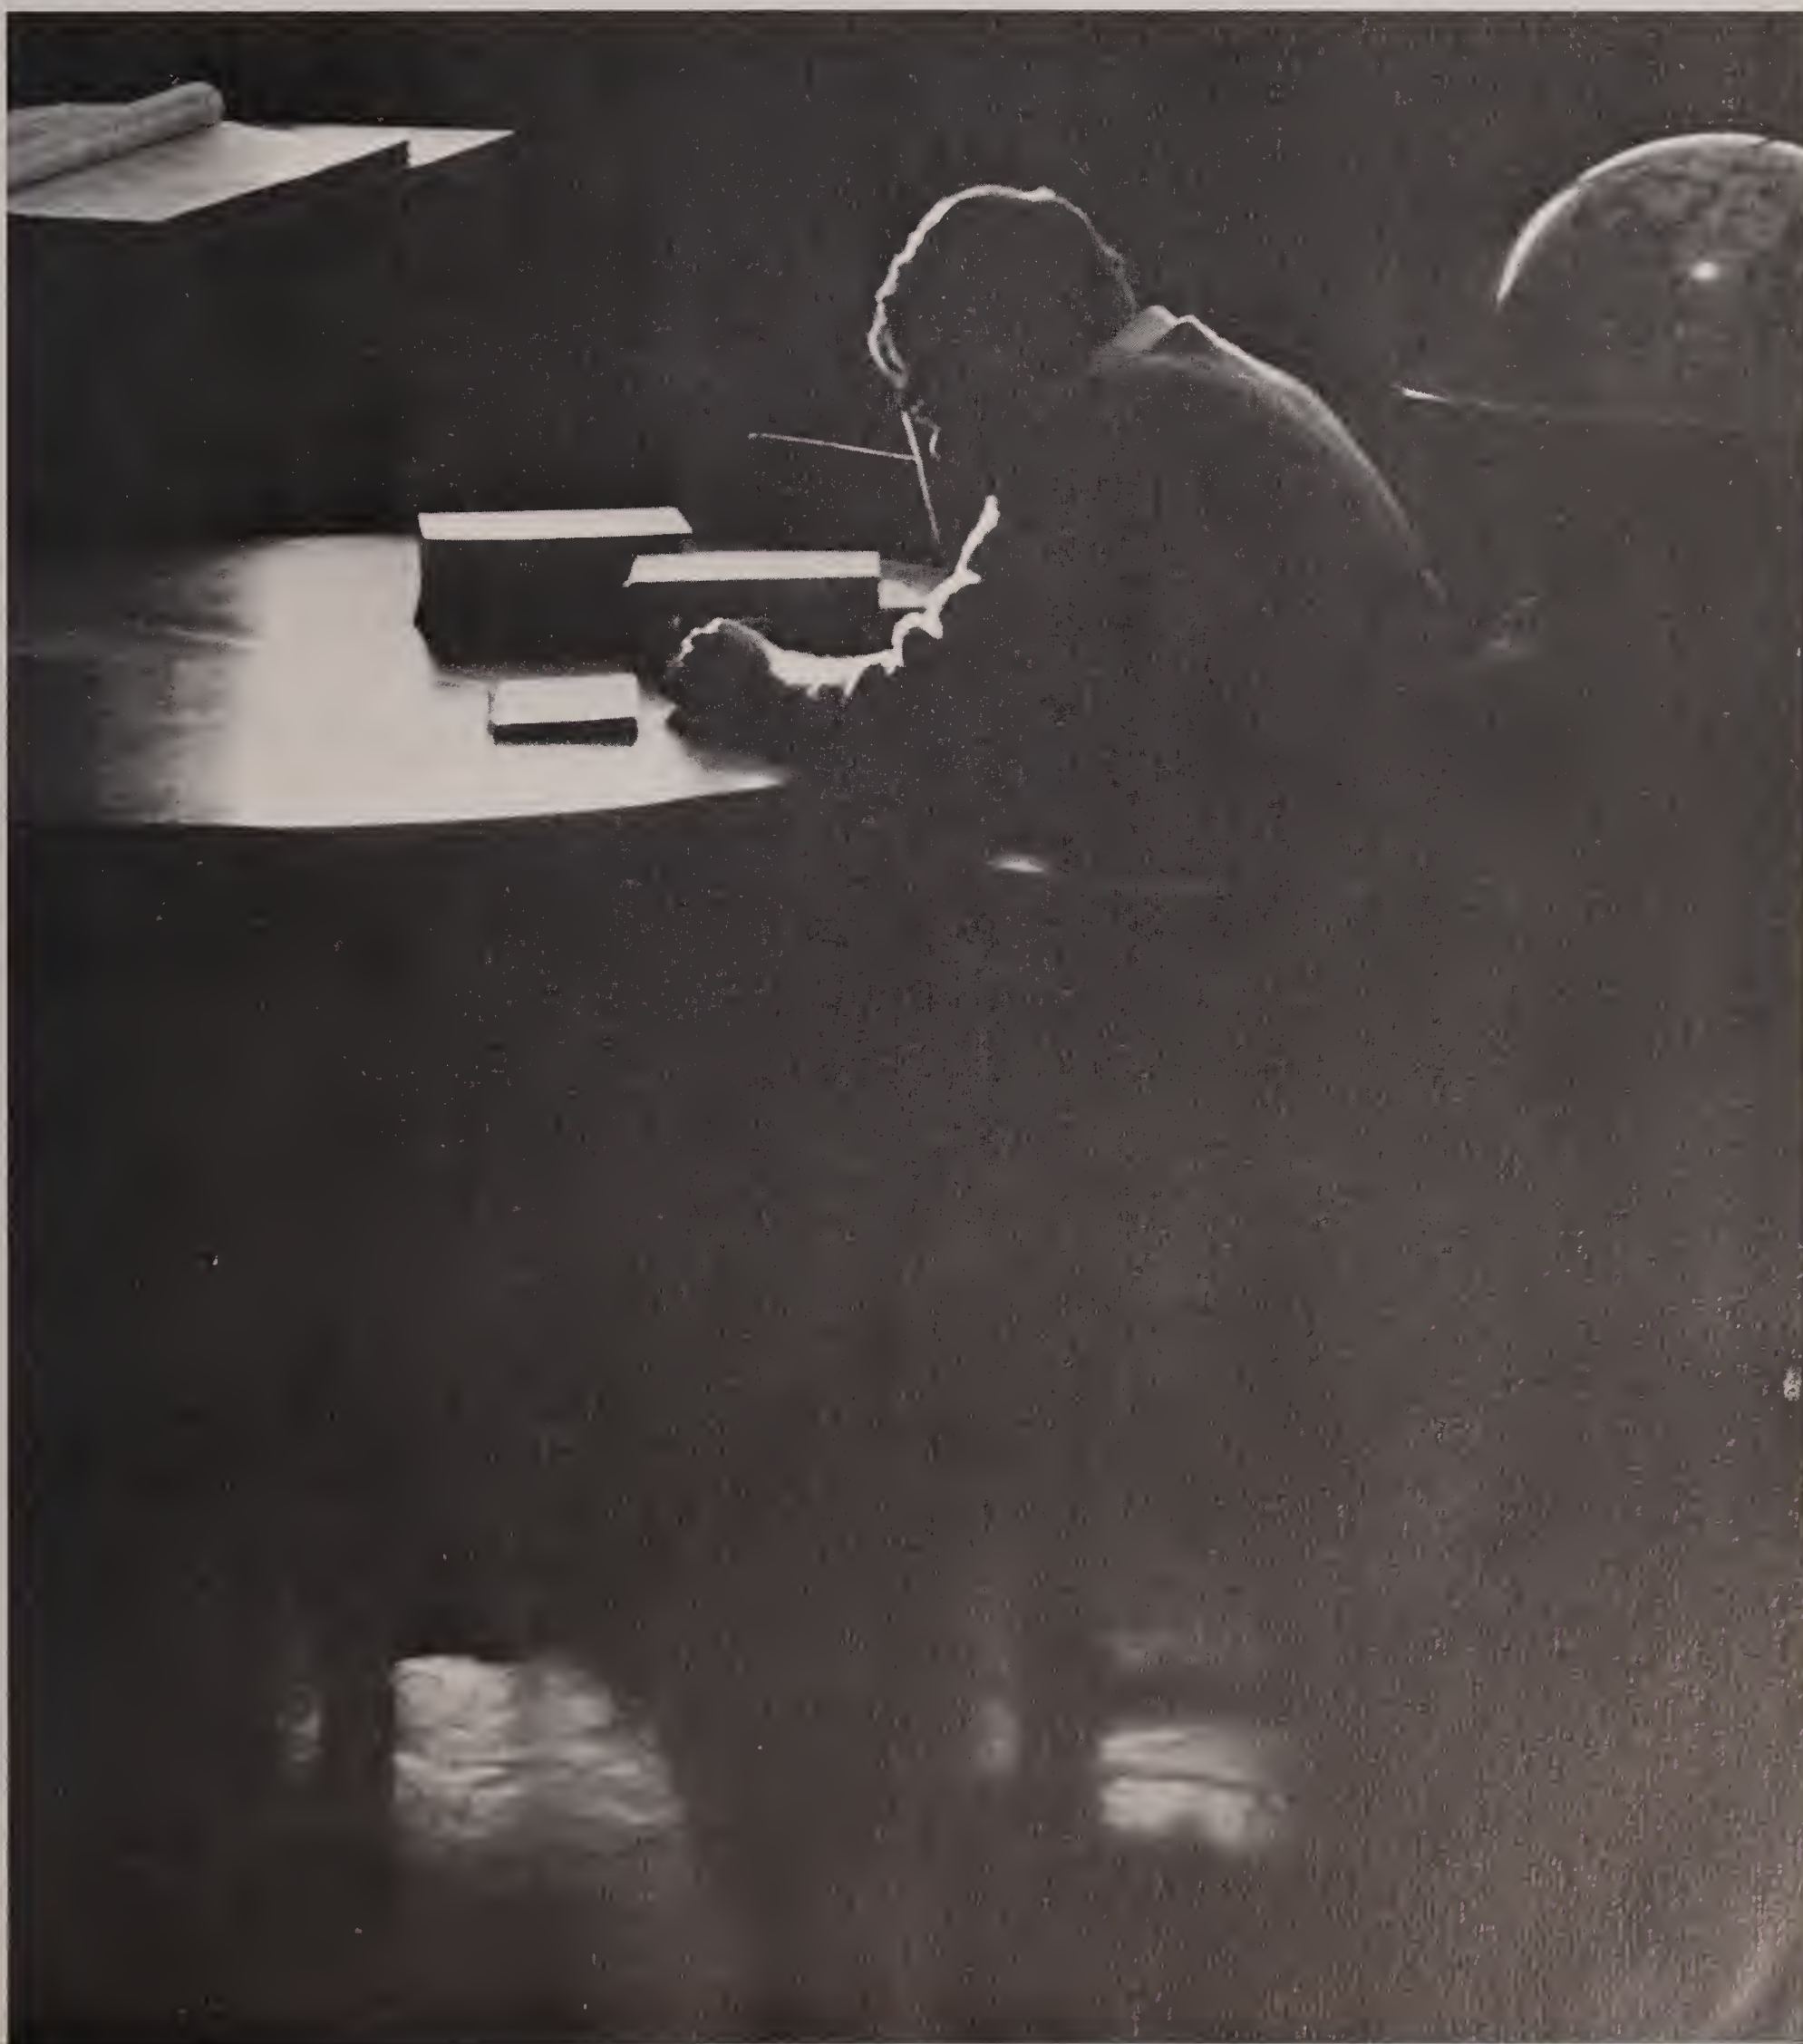

With a vision made bright by faith . . .

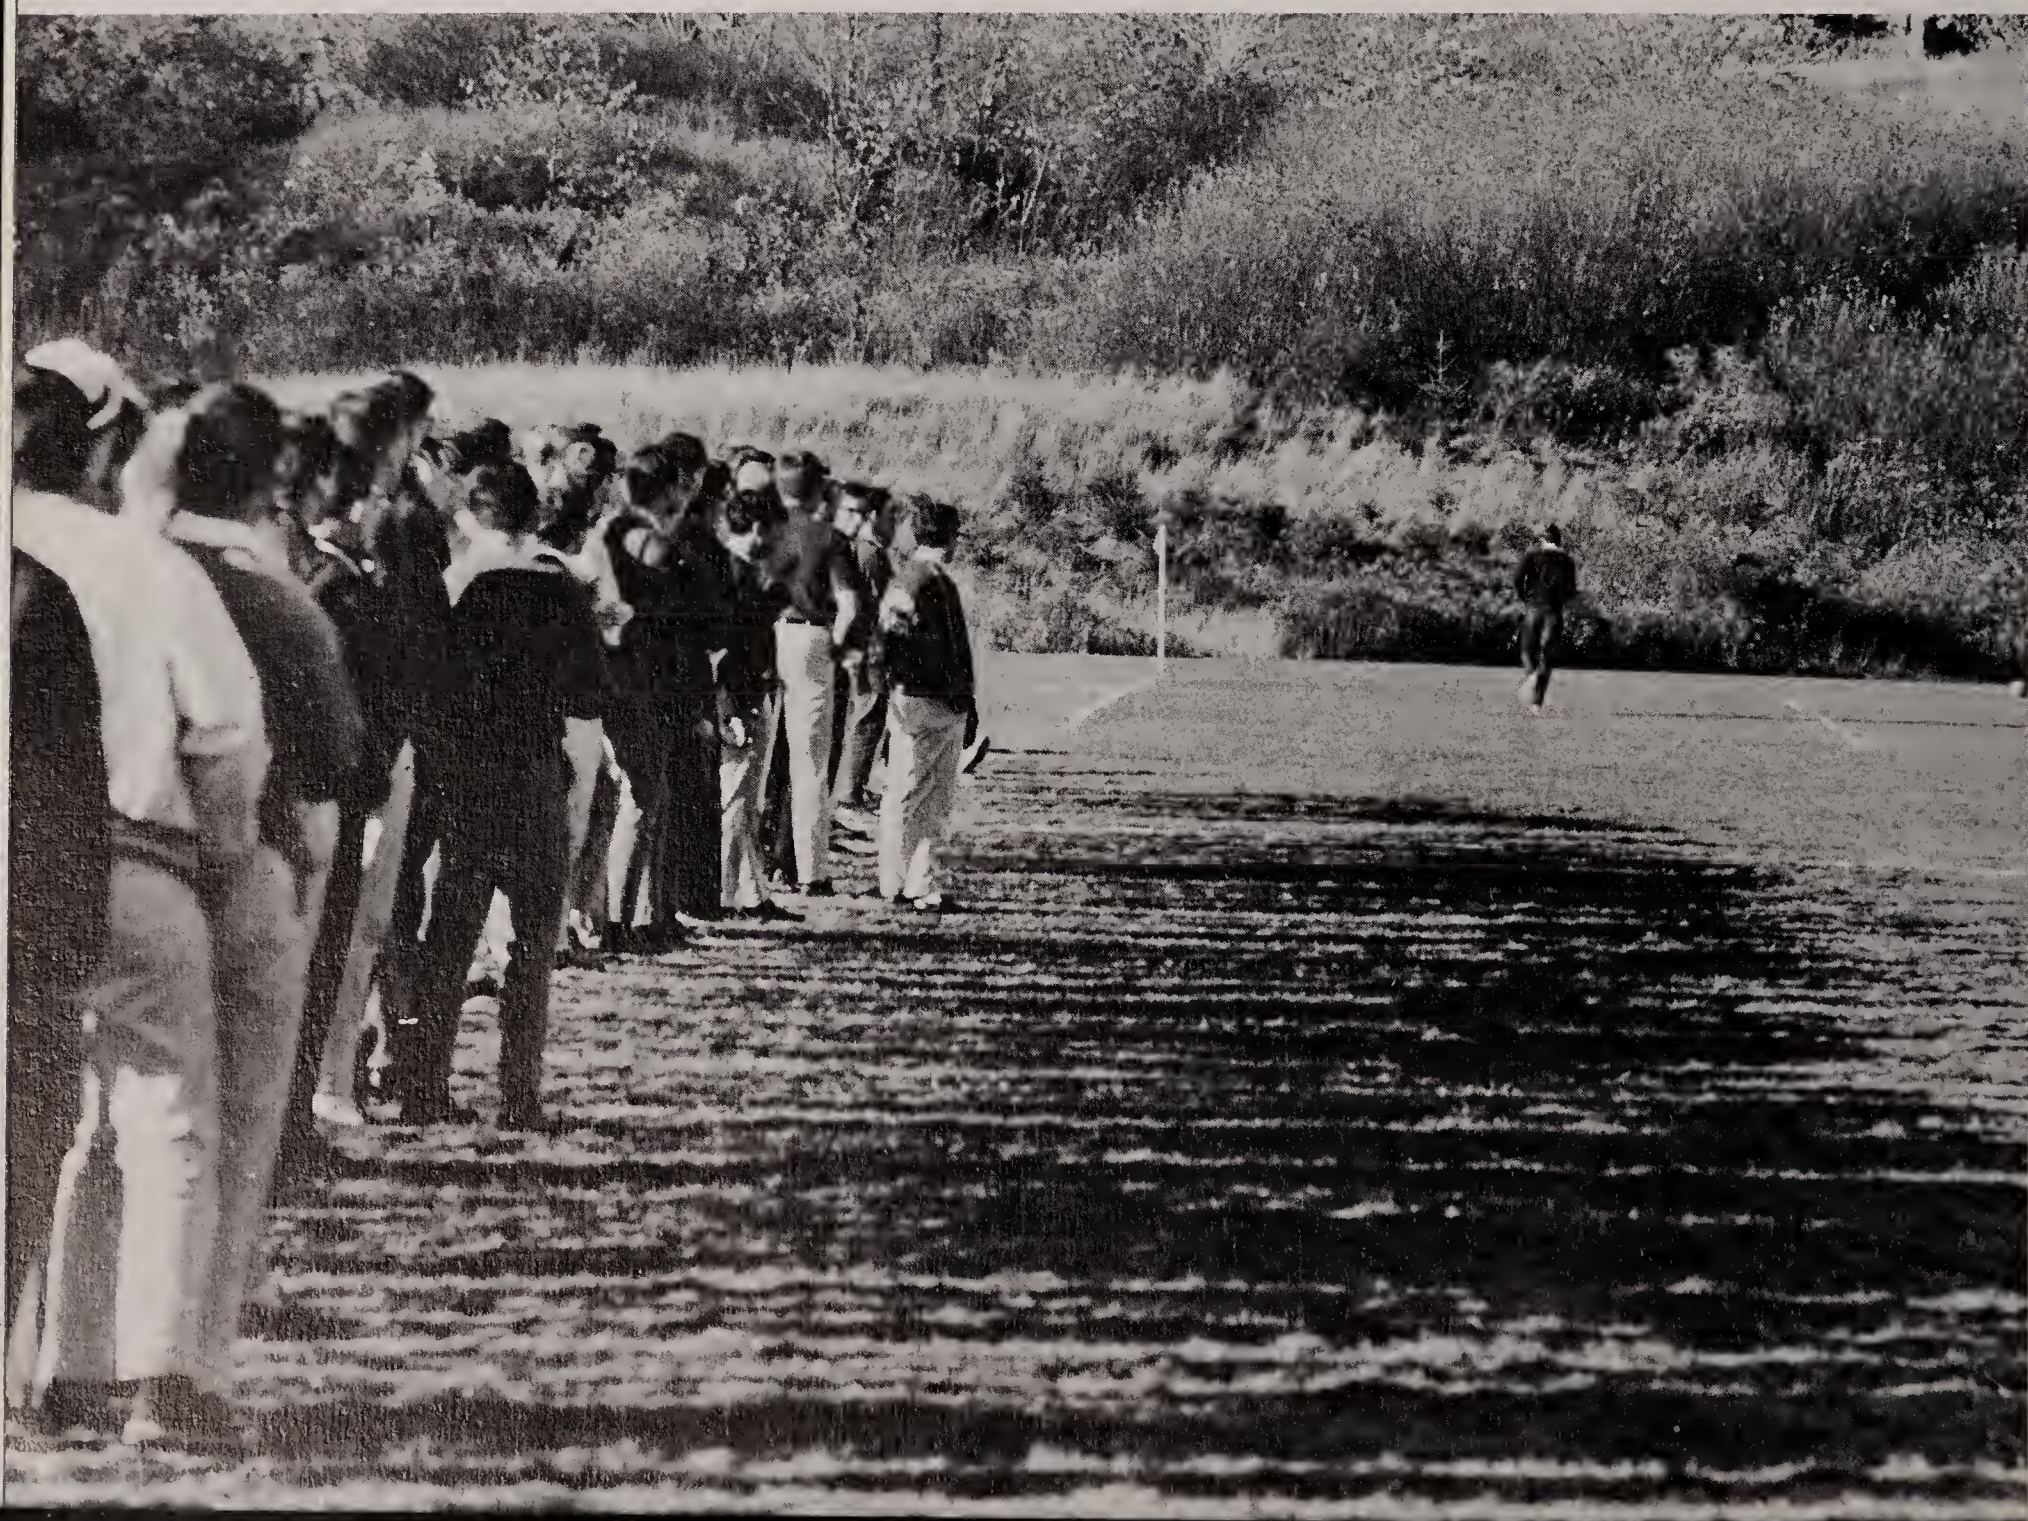

. . . with minds cleared and sharpened by encounter

with the great men of history . . .

*. . . we can in fact strive toward human perfection
and our own joy.*

*It is for this that we in our multiplicity
have come together.*
